0 Scale Schneider Freight Building (279-5098)

If you've driven down the Interstate, you have probably seen the bright orange trailers of Schneider National. The Green Bay based trucking company first hit the road in 1935, and they have evolved with the times. Today, they are a key player in the transport market. Whether the job calls for local or long haul trucking, less-than-truckload jobs, intermodal movement, or international cargo, Schneider can handle it.

The Schneider Freight Building is a fully assembled and decorated freight loading facility designed to serve trucks or freight cars. The structure's footprint is 14" x 11-1/2" and it rises 5-3/4 inches high. Each side has a loading dock with three open doorways for transfer of cargo. The highlight of this building is an animated forklift that comes in and out of the doorway. Jack the German shepherd is keeping an eye on one loading dock.
