O Scale Caboose Coffee Shop (275-9034)

What better way to stand out from brick and chrome coffee shops than with a nostalgic bit of railroad history! This re-purposed railroad caboose has become a thriving hot spot for mobile caffeine fanatics, so be sure to add this to your O gauge city, where Caboose Coffee is the hometown coffee brand!

The model features interior and exterior illumination as well as Menard's water vapor "smoke" system. The caboose's red marker-lights are as distinctive of an "open" sign as you can find! In the drive-through, a flashy vintage Dodge® pickup truck awaits an order! Nearby is a small patio. It has three raised flower boxes with greenery in bloom. Two customers sit at a table, protected by a Caboose Coffee canopy! A server is carrying a tray with two fresh, hot brews toward them.

"O Scale" Rocket Launching Tower (275-9032)

This Rocket Launching Tower salutes the American space program and allows you to include a rendering of this technological marvel on your own O gauge layout!

This is fully assembled and decorated. There is illumination of the launch tower and red flashing warning lights on top of the structure. At the base of the rocket platform, you'll spot rapidly flashing red LEDs. Below the platform is a grate that houses Menard's water vapor "smoke" system. Just add water, and when power is applied, a visible torrent of vapor can be seen – simulating a rocket launch!

It has a massive tower structure with six levels and measures 16-1/2 inches high. There is a complex array of structural support beams as well as conduits for electrical line or fuel for the liquid-powered rocket motors.

O Scale Rocket Diner (279-8322)

For decades, dining cars and trolley cars have become eateries; cabooses have become tourist information offices, coffee shops, or craft stores. The Rocket Diner combines an iconic piece of railroad equipment with a trendy spot for a burger. The Rocket turns sitting trackside and having your breakfast into big-time fun!

The main structure is the body of an Electro-Motive F-unit diesel. Alas, the once majestic locomotive has been gutted and now serves up tasty food for hungry patrons. The model is decorated in homage to the iconic Rock Island graphics, with subtitle "GOOD FOOD" emblem on the nose. In years gone by, Rock Island and its passenger service was once dubbed "The Route of the Rockets."

The nose of the locomotive features an illuminated headlight. Both sides of the nose have number boards bearing the word "ROCKET." About mid-structure you'll see chase lighting for the word "DINER." This sequences as D-I-N-E-R and then flashes twice, and restarts again.

Last but not least, there is an operating smoke unit (which utilizes water vapor) that generates a nice wisp of smoke, suggesting the cooks are in action frying burgers.
